SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 10, 1858. VACCINATION WITH A MAGNETISED

NEEDLE. Professor Roso states that since 1866, hundreds of children have been thus vaccinated, with scarcely any failures occurring. The point of the needle is well saturated with the magnetic fluid before practising the vaccinations, which are then performed in the usual manner, a single magnetization serving for many vaccinations. It is quite surprising to observe the rapidity with which the vaccine virus is absorbed, when the needle is thus prepared .- London Illustrated News of March 18.

EXTRAVAGANCE IN DRESS.

Mr. Stirling, in his recently published book of travels in the United States, thus compliments our American ladies on their extravagance in dress: "The ladies of New Orleans, like their sisters of New York, are great dressers; indeed, corner of Alfred and Gibbon streets, fronting the dresses of American women generally, at least of the new rich class, are something fabulous in expense, taking into consideration the rank and fortune of the wearers and their husbands. The dresses of ladies in New Orleans, I am told, and by New Orleans people, often equal in richness and expense those of the crowned heads of Europe. What do you think of a creole lady's dress powdered over with diamonds, her husband probably a cotton broker? Ladies here think nothing of expending a large proportion of the profits of a year's trade in a few dresses. Of course, we must suppose that this is in most cases, done with the knowledge and approval of the husband. He works, or speculates, and his wife wears the spolia optima. "There is some excuse, or, at least, explanation of this, to us, astounding extravagance, in the circumstances explained above of American house-keeping. As a rule, the inhabitant of an American city does not keep house. He has no opportunity, therefore, of displaying his wealth, as our parcent mer-chants and manufacturers do, in fine houses, to "Printers' Alley. Terms at sale. plate and equipages. Neither is there the same passion for landed estates in America as with us. With land at five shillings an nere, its possession cannot confer social distinction. The New York stock-jobber does not lay out £100,000 on land at two per cent. to give him the entree to the houses of half-adozen neighbors, who drink his claret and laugh at him. He is making probably fifty, perhaps one hundred per cent. per annum on his capital, and all this fast gotten gain he can only display to the public in one way -by clapping it on his wife's back. An American's wife is the peg on which he hange out his fortune; he dresses her up that men may see his wealth; she is a walking advertisment of his importance; the 'sandwich' announcing to Broadway or Canal street, that her husband is a man of money and station. All this is very sorry work, but I do not see that it involves any greater absurdity than those displays of plate and upholstery by which our rich velgarians aunounce their wealth and hide their want of real refinement. If a sham gentility is to be set forth, it matters little whether it be done through the instrumentality of the upholsterer or the

THE PRAYER MEETING IN N. YORK. As this prayer meeting constitutes one of the peculiar features of the present revival, it is well to keep on record the way in which, under Providence, it was originated. As the increase of trade in New York had driven most of the churches away from the lower and business portion of the city, the Dutch Church, a corporation having great wealth, felt constrained to preserve one of their old churches down town, and to keep it supplied as a place of worship for strangers, a ing opened their house for this purpose they employed Mr. Lamphier to visit the poor and the sick, and the hotels, and explore the field to induce people to attend the church. This Missionary, says the account which we have GELATINE, Wood's Hair Restorative, seen, while walking down town one day, con- Sandford's Invigorator, just received, and for ceived the thought that an hour of prayer sale by could be profitably employed by the business men, confining no one to the whole hour, coming in and going out when it was convenient, and singing and praying and speaking as the Spirit should move. He mentioned the idea to one or two persons, but no one thought much of it; yet he resolved to carry out the idea. The appointed time came; three persons met in a little room on the third floor, in the rear of the church, and prayer was held. Mr. Lamphier presided, and one clergyman was present. The next meeting was composed of six persons; the next of twenty persons. The fourth meeting was held in the middle room; and from that time the meeting has became an institution in New York. Not far from twenty are now held. All these are crowded. The number of new meetings opened do not diminish those already established, but seem rather to call out new numbers to attend; and at no time has the interest been greater than today .- Boston Recorder.
